Brief Report

NATIONAL THREATENED SPECIES DAY CELEBRATIONS, SEPTEMBER, 2024

Considering the current scenario of biodiversity loss, the National Threatened Species Day, 2024 was celebrated. The students were asked to submit a write up of a threatened species of plant/animal which they consider important. This was an inter-collegiate competition conducted to raise awareness amongst the students about alarming decline of threatened species. At total of 14 entries was obtained and amongst them, Sanha V Salahudheen of III DC Microbiology, St Mary's College was selected as the winner by the judges. Sanha wrote on the importance of Red Panda: the gentle Flame of the Himalayas.

Red Panda: The Gentle Flame of the Himalayas

Tucked away in the misty heights of the Eastern Himalayas lives one of nature's most enchanting creatures—the Red Panda (Ailurus fulgens). Known for its russet coat, endearing face, and gentle demeanor, the Red Panda is not just another endangered species; it is a symbol of the fragile balance of life in some of the world's most beautiful ecosystems. Yet, this flame-colored beauty, which quietly roams the treetops, is slowly flickering out.

"In the eyes of the Red Panda, we don't just see a threatened species; we see the reflection of our planet's disappearing soul."
